Hadith of the Week:

Once Rasulullah (Sallallahu alaihe wasallam) went to a group of Sahaba, (Radhiyallahu anhum) and said to them, "What for are you sitting here?" They replied, "We are engaged in the zikr of Almighty Allah, and are glorifying Him for His extreme kindness to us in that He has blessed us with the wealth of Islaam." Rasulullah (Sallallahu alaihe wasallam) said, "By Allah, Are you here only for this reason?" "By Allah!", replied the Sahaba, (Radhiyallahu anhum), "We are sitting here only for this reason." Rasulullah (Sallallahu alaihe wasallam) then said, "I asked you to swear not out of any misunderstanding, but because jibra-eel (Alayhis salaam) came to me and informed me just now that Almighty Allah was speaking high about you i 'before angels."

Note: Enquiry on oath by the Prophet (Sallallahu alaihe wasallam) was simply to ascertain whether there was any other special thing, besides zikr, which might be the cause of Allah's pride. It became definite that it was only because of the zikr of Almighty Allah that He was proud of them. How lucky were those people whose worship was accepted, and the news of Allah's recognition of the zikr on their part was revealed to them in this very earthly life through Rasulullah (Sallallahu alaihe wasallam). Certainly, their sublime deeds deserved all this appreciation.

Fear of Allah

Hadhrat Aishah (Radhiyallahu anha) relates that whenever a strong wind bringing dense clouds started blowing, the Prophet's (Sallallahu alaihe wasallam) face turned pale with the fear of Allah. He became restive and would go in and out with perturbation, and would recite the following prayer:

"O, my Allah! I ask of Thee the good out of this wind, the good out of that which is in this wind, and the good out of that which is the outcome of this wind. I seek refuge in Thee from the evil of this wind, from the evil out of that which is in this wind, and from the evil out of that which is the outcome of this wind."

She says:

"And further when it began to rain, signs of delight appeared on his face. I said to him once, 'O, Prophet of Allah when clouds appear everybody is happy as they foretell rain, but why is it that I see you so much perturbed at that time?' He replied, 'O, 'Aishah! How can I feel secure that this wind does not portend Allah's wrath? The people of A'ad were punished with the wind. They were happy when they beheld the gathering dense clouds, believing that they brought rain; but actually those clouds brought no rain but utter destruction to 'A'ad."

Look at the fear of Allah in the heart of a person who is the best of all creation (Sallallahu alaihe wasallam). In spite of a clear verse in the Qur'an that Allah would not punish the people so long as the Prophet (Sallallahu alaihe wasallam) was with them (Al-Qur'an VIII: 33), he has so much fear of Allah in him that a strong wind reminds him of the punishment awarded to the people in the past. Now let us peep into our own hearts for a moment. Although we are fully saturated with sins, yet none of the unusual phenomena viz: earthquake, lightning, etc., arouses the least fear of Allah in our hearts and, instead of resorting to Istighfaar or Salaat at such times, we only indulge in absurd investigations.

The Teachers Pet

'Ha ha ha ha' laughed Miss Sandy in her crooked evil voice. All the staff members at East High believed that Miss Sandy was a very innocent teacher, but really she was an evil, ugly witch in disguise. Only Jessica knew the truth. Jessica Simpson was a big loner at East High; everyone thought that she was really weird. She spent all her days and nights reading books and was full of wild ideas and imaginations.

Jessica was fed up with nobody believing her about Miss Sandy being a witch, even her own mother told her to be quiet and stop making up ridiculous fibs. One day Jessica set out to prove her story, so she followed Miss Sandy home after school. The outside of her house appeared to be like any other house in the street, but the inside of the house was quite different. The walls were dark grey and the house reeked of mysterious potions. All of a sudden, Miss Sandy began sniffing with her long pointy nose, "I can smell a human child' she shrieked. Jessica froze with fear. "Come out from behind the bin you wicked child" Jessica slowly walked out and said "oh sorry to disturb you miss but I just needed to get some help with my maths homework". "Stop lying! You came here to spy on me; I will show you what happens to nosy little children'. She then pointed her long black wand at Jessica and turned her into a small black fluffy kitten.

The next day Miss Sandy came into class with a huge evil smile on her face. "Meet my new kitten girls; her name is Jessica". The small black cat meowed as all the students quickly turned to Jessica's desk and realised she wasn't there. "Ha ha ha ha" laughed Miss Sandy in her crooked evil voice.
